DON'T ALLOW YOURSELF TO THINK THAT THE BALDWIN
Dry-Air Refrigerator
is an ordinary one, similar to those sold by other dealers. It is different from them in the most important points. They are made on a new principle. Refrigerators are lined with zinc because Cloth cannot be used. It invites moisture, which by rusting the clamp that they would soon fall out of repair if they were not lined with zinc. This lining is a practical success of its usefulness for a receptacle for Ice.
M. B. Ayer, M. D., Surgeon General, Vt., writes:
"I have seen much danger from keeping food in improper refrigerators, and have seen cases of poisoning from the use of them. I shall use the Baldwin Refrigerator in my family, and shall recommend its use in my practice as a safeguard against the dangers of poisoning."
Sold for cash or on easy payments. Prices from $10 to $100. Call and see them.

The Davis Patent does away with Turning Works at Saws, as it is provided with three sets of collars and sapping knives on the saw arbor, and saps the bolt at the same time it is sawing. The arbor extends across the Machine, and the saw is outside of the frame, which prevents the saw-dust from clogging the gearing; and, in changing saws, you simply take the nut off end of arbor, and remove collars and saw without disturbing arbor.
The saw runs 2200 revolutions per minute, and the Machine will cut from 5 to 6 M. per day, an average of 500 per day over the old style machine.

STATE NEWS.

Androscoggin.

A young fellow from Phillips, six feet eight inches in height and weighing two hundred and fifteen pounds, attracted much attention on the street in Lewiston, Tuesday, among the crowds.

On Sunday evening the Lewiston police attempted to arrest Dizzie Buckley, of Auburn, who was drunk and disorderly. A riot ensued, in which a policeman named Odlin was roughly handled by several Lewiston roughs.

Senator Frye, who is salmon fishing on the Saguenay river in Canada, on Saturday sent an eight pound salmon to his daughter, Mrs. W. H. White, at Squirrel Island. The Senator writes that he is having a most successful fishing tour.

Senator Frye recently sent a splendid salmon to a friend, with the following letter: "I am away up in the Canada woods, 300 miles north of St. John, on one of the most beautiful rivers I ever saw. This noon at twelve o'clock a salmon took my fly, and in an hour and three-quarters I had the gaff into his side. He fought for life like a king, spring four or five feet out of the water nine times. I finally captured him two miles from the spot where I struck him." The salmon when taken from the box, three days afterwards, weighed 26¾ pounds.

Cumberland.

Mr. John Littlejohn, the assistant harbor master, at Peaks's Island, rescued his twenty-first person from the water at that island, on Sunday forenoon.

The new station of the Maine Central, at the Congress street crossing, Portland, is proving a great convenience, and is used by a large number of travelers.

Mr. Geo B. Libby, Portland, took seventy-five nice bass one day last week at Chandler's Mills. This is claimed to be the largest catch of the season in that section.

Mr. Eli Goss, of Portland, had a slight shock of paralysis a few days since. A doctor was called and under his treatment Mr. Goss is recovering rapidly.

George A. Dow has been appointed substitute letter carrier in Portland. Fred. G. Mitchell has been promoted from a substitute to full carrier, and E. R. Stanbird has been removed.

The hull of a schooner, sunk last spring in a Evergreen Landing has drifted down so that the Bound steamers are unable to make a landing there. Tuesday, the Minnehaha twice attempted to stop there, and at each time she struck the wreck and broke her wheel.

A boy fifteen years old, who gave his name as Freeland Morely, was in Albany, N. Y., Monday, on his way from Michigan to Portland. He said ten years ago his father abandoned his mother, who lost her mind and was in an asylum, the boy being placed in an orphanage. The boy was taken in charge by the overseer of the poor.

The drill squad of the Portland Wheel Club began practicing Tuesday night in anticipation of the tournament to be given in honor of F. A. Elwell's party at Bangor, July 23. Owing to the resignation of one of the members the squad had thought it impossible to enter the tournament, but the members having consented to drill with them at Bangor they will repeat the evolutions which proved so popular in Portland last winter.

Tuesday, while the workmen were engaged in tearing down the Lyman building, a large piece of timber fell into the office of A. B. Stevenson, the ship chandler, breaking the sash and glass. Some of the glass was driven into Mr. Stevenson's face, bringing the blood. A gentleman from Boston was standing back to the window, and the timber just missed him by about four inches. Had the timber struck either gentleman he would have been seriously hurt. Several narrow escapes of children have happened within a few days around the ruins.

Franklin.

Last Saturday night, thieves made an entrance into the cellar of the farmhouse of Mr. John W. Randall, of North Chesterville, and stole about one-hundred pounds of nice pork. This is the second time this season that Mr. Randall's cellar has been entered. The first time the robbers secured nearly one-hundred pounds of pork, making nearly two-hundred pounds in all stolen from him.

Kennebec.

The body of Samuel Towne, of Augusta, who was drowned, Monday, the 6th inst., was found at the Hallowell boom, Saturday morning, and buried Sunday.

Lincoln.

Among the prominent characters at Saratoga is Mr. Samuel A. Bridge, of Lincoln county. For fifty-five years successively, he has visited Saratoga, and he is probably the only gentleman living who has for so long a time been so regular a visitor. It was from Mr. Bridge that Harvard University received, a short time ago, the gift of the statue of John Harvard.

Oxford.

The dangers of the barbed wire fence were aptly illustrated at Rumford the other day. A colt in the keeping of C. W. Kimball became snarled up in the wire and before he could free himself was terribly cut about the head and legs.

Somerset.

Mr. J. C. Pillsbury, of Palmyra, who recently lost several valuable cattle by poisoning, has since lost his watch-dog in the same manner.

At Pittsfield there are a dozen dwelling houses in process of construction, and a block of three stores, at an aggregate expense of about $25,000. The village is one of the few in Maine that shows a good annual growth.

Last Saturday, while Mr. Loren R. Cook was engaged in raising an old building in Pittsfield, he fainted and fell backward, striking his head on an old cistern wall and then falling into the cistern himself. There was no water in the cistern at the time, but Mr. Cook was taken out unconscious and remained in a semi-conscious condition till Monday, when he seemed much brighter. His injuries are not considered dangerous.

Waldo.

James McCabe, who was badly burned in the Belfast fire, is in a more hopeful condition, and there are thought to be possible chances of his recovery. In addition to the twenty horses there were burned twenty hogs. On the American House and stables the loss is estimated at $18,000, on which there is an insurance of $10,000. Fred Frances' loss of $2,500 is covered by an insurance of $1,000. The burnt area covers about three-quarters of an acre. Every pane of plate glass in the Masonic temple towards the fire was cracked by the intense heat. The stables were just filled with hay, and probably contained between forty and fifty tons. Belfast has no steamer. The extent of the loss is variously estimated from $10,000 up to nearly double that sum.

Washington.

Prof. H. E. Wilson, formerly of Cherryfield, has been appointed county superintendent of schools in Hennipen county, Minnesota.

York.

The rumor afloat Saturday to the effect that a large amount of money and diamonds had been lost by a lady on the Old Orchard beach train, arose from the fact of Mrs. Orin Hamilton having lost a hand satchel in which she usually carried her diamonds. The satchel was found shortly after by the lady's husband with the contents intact.

A Comedy, not a Tragedy.

THE FOURTH OF JULY AFFRAYS AT THE FORKS—A SECOND BATTLE—THE PART THE BEANS TOOK IN IT—TRIAL OF THE OFFENDERS AT SKOWHEGAN.

The recent trouble at the Forks commenced between the river drivers and the Canadian hay makers on the 4th of July, says the Lewiston Journal. It seems that some of the river drivers stationed near the Forks on the Kennebec river were laying off, during the day. They procured some liquor and after they had got well under the influence of it, they commenced to amuse themselves by attacking the Canadians who were passing, overturning their buckboards, and at last taking from them any liquor they could find. It is reported by the Forks stage driver that from one party of Canadians they took by force a five gallon keg of whiskey, which they drank during the day, and after several fights, they stationed themselves by the road near dark to watch for the next party of Canadians. Several teams soon drove up and one Paddens took the horse of the leader of the party by the head and demanded his whiskey. The Canadian ordered him to let go his horse, and when Paddens refused to do so the Canadian, whose name was Roderick, hit Paddens over the head with a loaded whip felling him to the ground and severely injuring him. Another driver was knocked over into the river, falling a distance of some forty feet, and two others were knocked down, when the drivers decided that they had struck the wrong party and left.

It appears that there were three or four fights during the Fourth in that locality. The fight in which the Beans were engaged did not take place until the morning of the 5th of July. That fight came off in the highway near Bean's house, about two miles below the Forks. Jonathan Bean, the father, Hosea Bean and Manley Bean, two sons, and Mrs. Mary Bean, the wife of Jonathan Bean, were arrested and brought to Skowhegan last Friday to be tried for participating in the fight.

The Canadians claimed at the preliminary examination, that while their party, consisting of some twenty persons, were going by Bean's, the old gentleman came out of the house and attacked them and threw stones at them. They say they threw stones back again. At last the old man was reinforced by his wife Mary and the boys Hosea and Manley. They claim that they drove the whole family into the dooryard and got the advantage of them, but that the Beans got a gun and when they saw that they ran, the Beans followed them and one of the boys fired the gun at them and hit one of the Canadians with bird shot in the back and breast.

The Beans claim that the Canadians were the aggressors and had been drinking, but offered no proof at the examination before the magistrate, and were held to appear at the September term of court in the sum of $500 each. They procured bonds and were discharged. Several of the Beans were hit with stones, but none of the Canadians were hit except the one who claims to have been shot. Padden seems to have been the only man seriously hurt in any of the fights, and liquor seems to have been at the bottom of all the trouble.

The road to the Forks of the Kennebec and all other highways in Somerset county are perfectly safe for the traveler to pass over, day or night, and any attempt to magnify such affairs into tragedies is ridiculous.

Quarts of Diamonds.

A VISIT TO THE SULTAN'S TREASURE HOUSE—REALIZATION OF THE ARABIAN NIGHTS' DREAMS.

[Paul E. W. Sturdy, U. S. N.]

If you are in Constantinople, and the sultan intimates that it would give him pleasure to open the doors of the treasury for your inspection, you should not lose the opportunity. It is a privilege not easily obtained. Through the "August Gate," within the walls of the old seraglio, you can penetrate, over the lawns and around the tree of the janissaries you can wander, but at the "Gate of Health" a Turkish guard demands your firman—that talisman without which all entreaties are useless. If, after waiting, this firman is brought to person by an aid-de-camp of the sultan, what was civility becomes deference. The guards who a moment ago waved you aside that a black eunuch might pass and he saluted, now present arms to you, and another eunuch, a tall white fellow, comes forth to receive his highness' commands.

To the treasury is but a step, and whence all those attendants so suddenly spring is surprising. You are not, as you imagined alone with the aid-de-camp and the white eunuch, for here are twenty or more guardians of the treasury ranged on either side of the massive doors. The ceremony of entering is in itself imposing. The locks are elaborate and the mechanism intricate. The chief of the guards unlock one bolt, which he hands to the man on his right. A padlock he gives to an assistant on the left, and then along the dignified line he slowly distributes one piece after another of the ponderous combination.

The door is thrown open, and the treasury is before you. At the entrance stands the famous throne which in 1814 was captured from the shah of Persia. And it is here that you utter your first exclamation of wonder and admiration—exclamations of feeling which increase in intensity as your eyes rest upon the dazzling display, until words and thoughts fail to convey even to yourself any estimate of the wealth about you. This throne is perhaps three feet high and about the same across, and is one mass of diamonds, emeralds, rubies and turquoises. Over it is suspended a golden egg of more than a foot in diameter, and this egg sparkles and glitters with the precious stones with which it is studded. In the cases on every hand are rare treasures. Diamonds are everywhere—quarts of diamonds; there are turquoises around and between those diamonds—pecks of turquoises; and this is no exaggeration. There are emeralds of such wonderful size and value as to be beyond any estimate. In two cases there are two emeralds, one the size of a man's clenched hand, the other flat and as large as a hand extended. There are sword-hilts of solid emeralds. The famous jewel of Bangkok must be overshadowed in comparison.

I'd realize the pearls, imagine a table cover of beautiful pattern, and exquisite embroidery, and then fancy that there has been a hail of pearls ten minutes, and that they have all clung to this cover. That would be one piece of tapestry, and there are scores of them hanging in this room; and the pearls are as large as peas. That was head-work in the reign of some Ottoman ruler.

These are gems in bulk; rare old China vases filled to the brim with huge emeralds; Japanese screens overflowing with magnificent pearls; decorated plates heaped up with coral beads like ripe cherries; golden salvers blazing with the light of hundreds of immense diamonds; and scattered about with a lavish hand lie the pale and beautiful turquoises like blooming flowers in an unpretending bed for all this wonderous beauty.

There is the cradle in which ten sultans have rocked, and whose every motion sent forth rays as brilliant as the glory of their career; their little school-boys hung here, and still shine in their crust of gems. Diamonds, diamonds—everywhere is the glitter of diamonds. Surely they must have been guardians of the treasury who first dreamed of the "Arabian Nights." Presents from foreign magnates rival each other in value and splendor. Here is another jeweled throne, and over it hangs a ruby and an emerald of fabulous size. An Indian rajah's gift, a marvel of beauty, is in height four inches only, but in design most exquisite.

A rajah is seated on a throne, and over the throne is a canopy, in front is a slave. The body of the rajah is a single pearl, the waist and trunk of the slave of another pearl of curious shape; the legs and arms are solid masses of diamonds, the canopy is of diamonds. The effect is beyond description. You feel such surroundings, you cease to talk—what, indeed, can you say? Turn as you will, the diamonds flash at you, the rubies fire at you, the pearls soothe you, and the whole intoxicates you. You see the aide-de-camp smiling, but proud of his sultan's treasure, the accumulated treasure of over thirty rulers of the great Ottoman empire. With no odd mixture of half-formed thoughts, you pass into another room. A golden column confronts you, a model of the Trajan monument, over six feet in height and eight inches in diameter. It is imposing, but does not surprise you. You are prepared to see walls and doors of solid gold—you almost expect it. Over your head hang golden bird-cages with clocks at their base. As is proper and becoming, the hours are indicated by diamond figures.

You mount to a gallery and look at the original costumes of a score of dead rulers. The robes are magnificently embroidered, the turbans are immense, diamonds are twisted in the plumes, and the sword hilts are single gems. The older the date, the richer the dress, but all with turbans and robes, until the thirteenth sovereign adopts the fez and the red trousers in use to-day.

There is yet another room of equal splendor. Your bewilderment increases as you move on, and when at last you are bowed out by those grave watchmen, you wonder if they are not all sultans, and if you have not been dreaming.

Organs and Organs—Democracy's Monumental Cheek.

Nothing in journalism or politics is more insufferable or disgusting than the impertinence with which that nastiest and meanest kind of newspaper Democracy which labels itself "independent," and which is eager to do any kind of dirty work that will feed its spite against the Republican party, affects a superiority to those who have convictions and honestly proclaim them, and sneers at all such as "the partisan press" and as "organs." We find quoted—approvingly of course—in one of the most bilio-bound Bourbon sheets in New England, the following remarks of that late and shame-faced convert to Democracy the Boston Advertiser

[Boston Advertiser.]

Another failure to establish a Democratic newspaper organ in Philadelphia is recorded. If Philadelphia, a city of nearly a million inhabitants, will not tolerate one weekly Democratic organ, although she occasionally elects Democratic Mayors and county officials may it not reasonably be argued that the straight-out, thick-and-thin partisan press has outlived its usefulness?

By an amusing coincidence the same column which contained the above quotation, gave also the following from the Philadelphia Times, which calls itself "independent" but would seem to be sufficiently "organic" through thick and thin to satisfy any ordinary Democratic standard

[Philadelphia Times.]

It is a wholesome lesson to all parties that ex-Governor Noyes, of Ohio, was compelled to decline an honorary appointment as a minority representative on the National Railroad Commission, because of his complicity in the electoral burglary of 1877. The lesson is all the more wholesome and impressive because while the Democrats as with one voice protested against the appointment of Noyes, the Republicans, almost as with one voice, silently assented to the justice of the protest, and Noyes solved the problem by a prompt declination. It is one of Time's avenging judgments against national crimes that will make intelligent men of all parties take pause, and emphasize the honest sentiment of the country against those who stained the title of the President of the Republic with the slime of the ballot-thief.

Nothing more scandalously partisan or dishonest than the above could be conceived, and yet the Boston Advertiser can see nothing partisan in it, but rolls up its eyes and says they have no Democratic "organ" in Philadelphia.

We hardly know which to despise most the Advertiser's hypocritical subserviency to its new allies, or the bold and flagrant dishonesty that enables McClure in his Times to arraign ex-Governor Noyes for crime in having been a member of a board to attend the canvassing of the returns in one of the disputed States in 1876, when he knows, and every intelligent newspaper reader of that period knows that the revelations of the notorious Cipher Despatches exposed the complete and conclusive details of the most shockingly corrupt attempt of the Democratic candidate for the Presidency, Samuel J. Tilden to purchase the Electoral votes of several States by negotiations through his most intimate representatives including his nephew and private Secretary.

The coolness which that "thick and thin" Tilden organ the Times, now falsely asserts that the Republican press "assent to the justice of the Democratic howl at ex-Governor Noyes is a fair sample of the Democratic impudence that enables that party to dodge the most shameful chapters of its career by raising a preconcerted shout about some alleged Republican offence of no consequence whether there is any basis for the allegation or not, so long as the shouting is loud and persistent.

Why in this very case the swift screaming of the Times at ex-Governor Noyes because of his complicity in the electoral burglary, was undoubtedly inspired by the necessity to divert attention from the notorious and blistering fact of Gov. Headley's complicity in the attempt to perpetrate a monstrous fraud to seize the Electoral Vote of Oregon through the Cronin villany.

To illustrate the monumental cheek of these Democrats who have the hardihood to howl about "the stealing of the Presidency in 1876," we will refresh the public memory by reproducing simply one batch of the telegraphic witnesses of the monstrous conspiracy of fraud carried on between the barterers for Electoral votes and the nephew Private Secretary of the Democratic candidate at the residence of Samuel J. Tilden at No. 15 Gramercy Park, New York.

Republicans threaten if certificate issued to ignore Democrats' claims and fill vacancy and thus defeat action of Governor. One elector must be paid to recognize Democrat to secure majority. Have employed three lawyers, editor of only Republican paper as only lawyer; fee $3,000. Will take $5,000 for Republican elector; must raise money, can't make fee contingent. Sail Saturday. Kelley and Bellinger will act. Communicate with them. Must act promptly. [No signature.]

SALEM, Oregon, Dec. 5.

W. T. PELTON, No. 15 Gramercy Park, New York

Can't you deposit the eight, Charles Dimond, subject to the order Ladd & Bush, Salem. Can't get money here. Must have it Wednesday. Telegraph me at Salem. Vier will not fail. DOCTRINAL.

SAN FRANCISCO, Dec. 6, 1876.

HON. J. K. KELLY, Oregon

Headquarters telegraph me my request granted as first asked. Will make transfer to-morrow. Will programme be carried out. Answer. PATRICK.

SAN FRANCISCO, Dec. 6.

HON. JAMES K. KELLY:

The eight deposited as directed this morning. Let no technically prevent winning. Use your discretion. [No signature.]

The above is only a sample of one of the villanous attempts to buy the Presidency, proved by the correspondence of the personal agents of Tilden with "headquarters" at his house, and yet Tilden's party and his henchmen like McClure, of the Philadelphia Times, have the impudence to prate about Republican fraud in 1876. Do they think the people are fools? It would seem so.

Bowdoin's Victory.

While the friends of the Bowdoin boat crew were confident that they would have won a signal victory in the first race in the inter-collegiate regatta, had it not been for the disgusting action of the Cornell crew, which deliberately left its own course and fouled the Maine boys, still the fact that the Bowdoins did not cross the line first left the result of the race decidedly unsatisfactory. The result of the contest yesterday, however, fully confirmed the opinion that Bowdoin had the strongest crew in the regatta. The Maine boys not only defeated the Browns by several lengths but covered the distance twelve seconds quicker than the best time made by the Cornells during their practice before the first race. In the first race the Cornells made the distance in 9 minutes, 10½ seconds, while their best time was 8 minutes, 38 seconds. The Bowdoins time yesterday was 8 minutes, 20 seconds, and they were not pressed in the least.

The Bowdoins have acted throughout the contest in a most gentlemanly manner and their willingness to change the date of the final trial—already fixed by the referee—to accommodate the Brown crew, made them many friends. The Cornells on the other hand have so demonstrated their unseemly conduct in the race, which very properly caused them to be ruled out, by a bitter attack upon the Bowdoins in the public print, but the latter can well afford to ignore all such attacks which if only reflect upon the writers. Bowdoin men in this city were naturally feeling very much elated last evening and had on the white ribbon the college color.

Old Soldiers Not in Favor

AN ATTONEMENT THAT GIVES OFFENCE—REMOVALS IN THE PATENT OFFICE.

[By Telegraph to the Tribune.]

The demoralizing effect of placing the interests of wounded Union soldiers in the hands of men like General Black is shown in more instances than one. Not only have efficient and loyal veterans been dismissed from the Pension Office simply because they are Republicans and Democrats whose records can be traced in the blotters of police courts put in their places, but the maimed veterans are now unable to receive their quarterly pittance from the hands of ex-rebels and Confederate sympathizers as well. Mr. Davis, the new Pension Agent for Philadelphia, is an example, and his conduct much talked of in Washington. He is a Confederate sympathizer or else he would have refused to print the sworn affidavits contained in the book of his friend, Mr. Barbiere, which he appointed to a place in his office. This case has caused universal indignation among soldiers. There is a movement on foot, it is understood looking toward a formal protest to be submitted to the Senate to Mr. Davis' confirmation next winter.

The removal of several old soldiers on the roll of the Patent Office, but not within the classified service was the cause of a visit to the Commissioner of Patents by a committee from the Grand Army. The committee represented that these men had been good soldiers and were faithful in the discharge of their duties. They were told that the matter would be taken under advisement; but it was not probable that the places would be restored to them as they had already been filled. There have been a great many changes among the employes of the Interior Department outside of the classified service, and the complaint is made that no exception is made in favor of old soldiers.

The Protective Tariff

An important meeting in the interest of the national work in the protective tariff field was held in New York Wednesday afternoon. It was the culmination of the efforts that have been going on for six months to form a protective tariff association of national scope. The meeting was for the purpose of organizing the Board of Managers of the American Protective Tariff League. There was present A. H. Ammidown and Cornelius N. Bliss of New York, W. P. Shinn of Pennsylvania, ex-Gov. P. C. Cheney of New Hampshire, W. A. Ingham of Pennsylvania, William Strange and Henry T. Cook of New Jersey, and E. A. Hartshorn of Troy, of the new board. Mr. Ammidown was Chairman and M. M. Budlong Secretary. The Committee on Organization reported the receipt of letters of acceptance from the following gentlemen to act as the first board of twenty managers and their terms of service under the constitution were arranged as follows:

For one year—Edward M. Knox, New York; William Strange, New Jersey, Charles H. Crum, Pennsylvania, Levi L. Brown, Massachusetts; George H. Ely, Ohio. For two years—Edwin H. Hurlbut, New York; Henry T. Cook, New Jersey, Oliver Williams, Pennsylvania, Theodore M. Ives, Connecticut, Henry B. Metcalf, Rhode Island. For three years—Cornelius N. Bliss, New York, Arthur W. Soper, New Jersey, William A. Ingham, Pennsylvania, P. C. Cheney, New Hampshire, David Harpster, Ohio. For four years—Le Grand B. Cannon, New York, Edward H. Ammidown, New York, Wm. P. Shinn Pennsylvania, Smith M. Weed, New York, George Draper, Massachusetts. The organization committee also reported the papers of incorporation filed, and all the necessary legal steps taken for the formation of an incorporated company. There was a long discussion, occupying nearly the entire afternoon, over methods and plans, with the final result of appointing the following committee to select and report officers at a meeting to be called when they are ready to report, E. H. Ammidown, W. P. Shinn, Wm. Strange, C. N. Bliss, Le Grand B. Cannon.

The New England Offices.

HAVE THE EFFORTS OF FRANK JONES AND OTHER OFFICE-SEEKERS MET WITH SUCCESS?

[Special Dispatch to the Boston Journal.]

WASHINGTON, July 15. Frank Jones of New Hampshire and some of the Maine delegation left for New England to-night. There is no claim that they accomplished anything. The matters pending when they came are pending still. The subject of the reorganization of the railway mail service is as far from being settled as it was before Frank Jones or Superintendent Bigelow arrived. The Augusta Postmastership has again been taken up. The President talked freely with his Maine visitors on the subject, and promised to act promptly. Edmund Wilson is still here, as are some of the others interested in the Collectorships and Post Offices. Mr. B. B. Smalley spent the day at the Post Office Department and Treasury.

Even the Boston Herald, whose prejudice against Mr. Rondé is extreme, thinks that Mr. Garland's decision in the Dolphin case is "of questionable utility," and adds though it may let the Government out of a bad bargain, "it will make it exceedingly difficult in the future for the Government to get its contract work performed by honest and reliable business men at reasonable rates of charge."

The open efforts of a number of prominent Democrats to become members of Tammany Hall does not look as though that organization was much hurt by the failure of the Administration to recognize it in the distribution of the spoils. In fact, Tammany is showing uncommon liveliness. There seems to be strong ground for believing that Mr. Kelly will soon be in active control again. In that event, if the Administration attempts to defeat Governor Hill for renomination, it is likely to find out what is in the hickory with a burr saw.

Cleveland's Fishing Trip.

THE PRESIDENT'S BEDWOOD, WHITNEY'S DOLPHIN AND LILAS' OFFENSIVE PARTISAN.

[Washington Cor. Philadelphia Press, July 13.]

The President returned to the Capital to-night in a special car from the Woodmont Rod and Gun Club on the Upper Potomac, where he went last Saturday afternoon. The party, which was composed of Mr. Cleveland, Private Secretary Lamont, Secretaries Whitney, Manning, Lamar, Postmaster-General Vilas and two or three members of the club, enjoyed themselves immensely.

The first bite the President had was so dainty that he said he wasn't sure whether it was a bass or a Mugwump as both nibbled coyly at first. After playing with it for awhile he landed a fine fish and justified his reputation as a skillful angler. Secretary Lamar went out in a boat with a good array of tackle and, after adjusting his flies, waited for a rise. He didn't happen to strike a good spot for fish, and, as he felt no evidence of a bite from anything but a mosquito for half an hour, he turned his rod over to his boatman, and, taking out a copy of Shelley, was soon lost to all his aquatic surroundings. His boatman, however, faithfully attended to his work, and the result was that the Secretary of the Interior showed the largest string of fish of any of the party, and, of course, modestly claimed to have caught them all himself.

Secretary Whitney was just going to take a boat when he espied a tadpole sitting on the top of the dam. "Hold, on," said the enemy of John Roach, "I'm going to fish on the dam, wherever you see a tadpole there you will find bass." "Don't be sure," said Manning, "there isn't any bass there." "Hey, Judge?" appealing to Judge Hillyer, president of the Woodmont Rod and Gun Club. The Judge said he had never caught a bass there, but Whitney was obstinate and the rest went off and left him.

Mr. Whitney seized the tadpole placing him on his spoon hook, waded out on the dam and made a cast far out in the water. He then seated himself to await results. Soon he felt a bite and he let his line run out to give the fish greater play. He paused anxiously, and at last thinking he had hung his game, he began to reel in. He was engaged in this delightful occupation when Manning and Hillyer came back. "Hello" said the Secretary of the Treasury, "have you caught anything?" "Don't bother me now," replied Whitney, "I've got something big on my hook, I think it must be a dolphin," and he pulled vigorously on his line to draw it in.

"What is your tadpole?" asked Manning. "Why, on the end of the hook," replied Whitney. "No he isn't," said Manning. "He is on the dam behind you." "Pshaw," said Whitney, "that's another one. I'll be fooled again with a force that slipped the tadpole his rod off." Manning and Hillyer made an examination and found that the tadpole had that gone down under the dam and then came up again, wrapping the line around the hand and fastened himself to the same position as when first seen by the Secretary. When the story was told the President he laughed heartily, and joked Whitney to seek the Attorney General's opinion as to whether he could proceed against the tadpole for damages to his fishing rod.

Private Secretary Lamont is about like Private Secretary Phillips under the old Administration—he is a great fisherman. Phillips caught a twenty five-pound salmon once with a eight ounce rod in the Restigouche and said it took him thirty minutes to land it. Lamont caught the biggest fish of any of the party, it being a splendid bass weighing over four pounds, and his brother, amiable Private Secretary Jim Lamont, was only forgot by the witch to bring him luck. The fact that the bass was on the end of the boatman's line, and that he had a hard time to land Lamont brought him into the boat with a sinking not doubt interfere with the reputation of the Private Secretary as the fisherman.

Postmaster General Vilas only caught one fish during the entire time, and that was a sucker, which he said reminded him of an offensive partisan Postmaster, and so he retired to the clubhouse and played whist with a dummy till the others had finished their sport. Secretary Manning did not fish, but inspected the grounds of the Woodmont Rod and Gun Club with Judge Hillyer and finally settled down and figured out to the Judge how much retrenchment the club could make by the discharge of two boatmen and one necessary bait catcher. He explained to the Judge that these men did not come under the civil service laws and that their places need not be filled, but that, if necessity compelled them to increase their force he could exercise the choice of selection without correspondence with Dorman B. Eaton.

St. John vouches for the social and political civilization of Copiah County, Mississippi. But even a Democratic President takes no stock in St. John since the election.

If your blacksmith insists upon burning your horses feet says the National Stockman in order to make the shoes fit, hunt another farrier at once. The horseshoer who will do such a thing is either an ignoramus or is too lazy to do his work as it should be done.

Some people think anything they get from away, is superior to the home production, but there is a mistaken notion, at least as far as pictures are concerned, therefore I see no plausible excuse for sending pictures away to be copied, when they can be done better and cheaper (nine times out of ten) at home. I will match my work and prices against any copying house in the country and leave the public to abide the result.

The Colonel.

A STORY OF AN OLD SOLDIER.

[San Francisco Ingleside.]

"What has become of Lenoir?"

"Yes, where is Lenoir?"

The phalanx of solid business men, comprising the bulk of the membership of Garland Post, No. 3, Grand Army of the Republic, had regarded as a downright grievance a call to attend a meeting for the transaction of special business, appointed at the very inconvenient hour of two in the afternoon. They had responded to the order under protest, taken part in the proceedings with an abstracted air, fumed at the break in their daily routine, ostentatiously consulted their watches with the anxiety of men who were neglecting important engagements, and when the meeting at length adjourned gathered into cosey knots here and there, and settled down for a comfortable chat and the revival of old Army reminiscences.

The first speaker, Jim Brewster, was a lumber merchant who had acquired extensive tracts of land covered with a forest growth second only to the big trees of the Calaveras and Mariposa groves. He had so prospered in his business ventures that his name had become identified with the natural product he ruled in the commercial world, and he had gained the sobriquet of the Prince of Redwood. He had lately purchased a large piece of land at the foot of Sixth street, including within its boundaries that unsavory but classical region on the banks of Mission Creek known as "the dumps," where the Indian scavengers had from time immemorial deposited the contents of their carts, and raked the putrid and decaying masses of paper, scraps of old iron and other articles of commerce, as well as the pieces of plate benevolently dropped into the ash-barrel by careless servants. Mission Creek, at high tide, is for a considerable distance a navigable stream, and it was generally conceded that Brewster's branch yard was a shrewd venture, and would soon turn the tide of traffic from the crowded thoroughfare of Stewart street. The Prince of Redwood himself had felt all the glow of a prudent man's complacency over this evidence of his own sagacity, but a stormy interview in the underwriters' office that noon had disturbed the serenity with which he had hitherto viewed his new acquisition. Meeting some old comrades, men of his own regiment who had fought side by side with him through the four years of the "civil" war, he cast aside the perplexities of the day and plunged with eager zest into an animated discussion of past campaigns, in the course of which he made the inquiry that heads this chapter. The question was repeated by an echoing chorus,

"Lenoir?" The speaker who volunteered a reply was a member of that very agreeable and highly entertaining class of individuals who are commonly accredited with the possession of universal knowledge, and whose information is about as diffuse and inexact as the average encyclopedia of biography. "Lenoir's wife died just before he was mustered out in '65. Broke him all up for a while, but he rallied and went down to Florida, invested in an orange grove, and lives on the fat of the land."

"He was an odd fellow—Lenoir," remarked a gray-bearded veteran; what endeavored to reconcile his predilection for powder and cold steel to keeping a gunshop in Bush street."

"Odd! there wasn't a nobler fellow in the service. He was a hero, if ever one existed," Brewster spoke with such unwonted energy that the others looked at him in surprise, for he was generally regarded as phlegmatic in society and cold-blooded in his business relations. He cooled down a little as he observed the sensation his remark had created, and exchanged his enthusiasm for a dry argumentative tone.

"You know I was mere boy when I enlisted. Some of our folks knew Lenoir, my mother spoke fo him ev'ry day we marched, and—well, I could tell you a thing or two about the Colonel that none of you ever knew. I'm not going to gush over the man, but you may be interested to hear of a little incident that happened in Eastern Tennessee. You remember July, 186-, when we marched through the mountains and camped in a narrow defile they called Rattlesnake Pass? By George! I shall never forget the place to the day of my death, shut in by steep, rocky walls, loose sand underfoot, not a green leaf or blade of grass to be seen, outside of a scant green fringe bordering the struggling brook that trickled along one side. I nothed such things and cared more about them than the older men. When I joined the Army I was just turned eighteen, and chock full of patriotic fire, ready over the justice of our cause, ambitious to earn distinction, greedy for carnage and bloodshed. One year has cooled me down in a wonderful way, and the cause might have gone to thunder for all I cared that night. I would have relinquished the gorliest battle that ever was fought to be back again on our muddy land knee deep in the long, cool grass, driving the cows home from pasture. I was ravenous for a taste of home cooking, and would have forfeited all the epaulettes in the country for one of my mother's nine-pies. They put me on duty that night, posted sentries at the entrance to the pass to keep a sharp lookout for the enemy, for if they had come on us unawares they would have caught us like rats in a trap. My heart sank when my name was called, and, if I hadn't been for the ridicule, I'd have tried to get off by pleading sick. You see I was pretty well used up by the long marches, the uncertain rations, and the heat, and the homesickness. The hot sand clogged my steps and burned my blistered feet, the rocks seemed to radiate the heat they had stored up during the day, the air was dry and charged with dust. I kept up my best a while and then sat down on a boulder and rested; then I deliberately lay down and shut my eyes to go to sleep."

"Fine thing! if one of the officers had caught you," observed one old soldier drily.

"Precisely what happened. I was sliding off into a delicious slumber when I heard a movement near by. I opened my eyes and saw Colonel Lenoir. I thought the day of doom had come for me, for there was hardly a week passed that we didn't hear of some poor fellow being shot for sleeping at his post. I was so stupid with fatigue and drowsiness that I couldn't somehow quite make out where I was. Everything was jumbled up in my mind. The cows coming home from pasture, the mince-pie on the table, an open grave and a boy standing up as a target for a line of soldiers, my mother in tears."

Brewster stopped abruptly, and somebody asked eagerly what happened next, what the Colonel said.

"Lenoir had not known a good night's rest for weeks. He had been twenty-four hours in the saddle," said Brewster, slowly and impressively. "He was worn out physically and mentally. He had directed his aide to call him at daybreak the next morning. But he took my musket up from the rack where I had placed it, ordered me to lie down again, and did duty for me two hours while I slept."

There was no comment on Brewster's story. The account of a noble deed slips quietly into the heart without parade or flourish. After a few moments of silence, some one put a query in which lurked a suggestion.

"Lenoir acted finely at Andersonville, too, didn't he, Brewster?"

The lumberman gave a short replicate, consulted his watch, and rose to go. Despite the self-depreciation of his narrative, all were aware that he had been one of those noble specimens of American manhood who had survived the horrors of that awful experience, and finally emerged an emaciated wreck of humanity whose heroic devotion to a noble principle will resound throughout the everlasting ages. But he could never be betrayed into any relation of his prison experience. He pulled on his driving-gloves, nodded cool adieux to the score or more of loungers, and was soon driving at a quick pace up Market street and out Sixth. For the first few blocks the well paved street was lined with handsome buildings and presented the appearance of an important thoroughfare; but, as he progressed, the buildings dwindled in stature and were occasionally alternated with a handsome, comfortable residence, and the pavement grew uneven. Half a mile further the street abandoned all pretence at smartness, trailed humbly between one-storied warehouses, leaped a railroad track, lost itself in a maze of switches, and presumed existence in the guise of a wagon road, terminating with a dismal wooden structure, standing in a desolate region and flanked on one side by tall lumber piles. The clerks and day laborers were filing away, and the night-watchman, a quiet-mannered man, with an unlit lantern in his hand, stood on the steps.

"Well, Martin, what success?"

"I gave them warning, sir, to clear out early this morning, and kicked their houses over after they left, for fear they'd be back again to-night, like rats—that is all but one."

"Great guns, man! Don't you know one's as bad as a dozen? I can't get a dollar of insurance on the stock without paying double rates until I can satisfy the company that the whole tribe is gone."

The tribe referred to by Brewster consisted of a floating population of disreputable vagabonds, allied in character to the hoodlums and criminals commonly known as "whiff-rats" and "night-hawkers," who had shunted on the "dumps" in defiance of the tin cans plentifully scattered over the ground in the construction of a stockade in village. The members of this peculiar substratum of society were fabled to eke out their existence by stealthily gathering in the heaps by which they were surrounded. They were looked on by the police and the public as a dangerous class of citizens, and the underwriters very wisely refused to insure property in their proximity at the ordinary rate. Martin, meanwhile, advanced a lame self defense.

"It was early, and he hadn't shown a blind eye, sir. I didn't quite like to knock, he's house down about his ears. You see, Mr. Brewster, he's different like from the rest—quite a gentleman himself always them, you know."

This stammering communication aroused Brewster. A queer notion entered his head. He would confront the usurper himself, and see what manner of creature he was. He called to the office-boy who was walking down the road, bidding him drive up to the house and inform his wife that he would be detained a couple of hours.

The two men left alone stood at the window and looked in the direction of the mixed village, to detect some sign of life, but they saw only a stray dog who wandered disconsolately amid the ruins sniffing the heaps of garbage with a disdainful air. The light waned and the settled mass of ashes that had been lying in wait amid the western hills and across the Straits closed in upon the city. The merchant grew impatient under the long delay.

"To be concluded."

To the Honorable Judge of Probate for the County of Penobscot.

suffered for more than five years with indigestion, barely able to retain the simplest food on my stomach. The burning sensation was almost unbearable, and my whole system was deranged. I was weak and could not sleep, and cause upon more or less severe at the time. I decided to try S.S.S. In a word, I was miserable. After trying to find relief in everything else, I commenced the use of Swift's Specific. I began to improve at once. The medicine toned up the stomach, strengthened the digestive organs, and soon all that burning ceased, and I relish and digest food without difficulty. Now my health is good, and I can eat anything in the shape of food, and digest it without the slightest difficulty. I most cheerfully give this testimony, hoping that it may be instrumental in saving as I was, and I always have cause to recommend S.S.S. Take no other. Free From Malaria

In the fall of 1881 I was taken with a case of malarial fever which prostrated me both body and mind. I was dragged after the last fashion with mercury and other famed mixtures, but with no good results. My health was shattered and my vigor gone. My legs and feet would swell, and I felt that everybody thought I was dropping. These symptoms alarmed me, and I was ready to grasp at any remedy suggested. A friend advised me to try Swift's Specific. I procured three bottles and commenced its use. The swelling soon subsided, I laid aside the place bottle, which has come in handy ever since, and I feel like a new man. To-day I am free from malaria, more, medicine and relief to suffering humanity. It has wrought wonders for me. WILLIS JONES

Doctor.—"Yes; you are bilious. You just get a box of Wright's Indian Vegetable Pills and they will cure you."

FOR BILIOUS COMPLAINTS.

Bilious Complaints are caused by torpidity, congestion, or the alteration of the bile.

The symptoms are dark, greasy, yellow skin, a brown or whitish coat on the tongue, appetite irregular, often a dry cough at night.

The skin sometimes breaks out into pimples and sores, and the whole system is out of order. Wright's Indian Vegetable Pills are one of the very best remedies known for any form of these troubles, and will certainly relieve the sufferer. They are purely vegetable, made from the best drugs by competent hands, and give satisfaction. They are very gentle in their action, causing no griping nor weakening feeling to the most delicate. A trial will convince any one troubled with biliousness that Wright's Indian Vegetable Pills is the medicine he needs.
